

Culinary Strategies to Spice Up Your Clients' Kitchens

By Shayna Komar, RD, LD, and Nancy Waldek

References

1. American Chemical Society. Researchers call herbs rich source of healthy antioxidants; oregano ranks highest. ScienceDaily website. www.sciencedaily.com/releases/2002/01/020108075158.htm. Published January 8, 2002.
2. American Spice Trade Association. Spice Advice website. www.spiceadvice.com
3. Cooking with herbs and spices. University of Michigan Health System Publications. <https://www.med.umich.edu/pfans/docs/tip-2013/cookingwithherbsandspices-0513.pdf>
4. Culinary techniques for healthy school meals. National Food Service Management Institute website. <http://www.nfsmi.org/documentlibraryfiles/PDF/20100210102351.pdf>
5. D'Or Institute for Research and Education. Plant compound found in spices, herbs increases brain connections. ScienceDaily website. <https://www.sciencedaily.com/releases/2015/12/151210144912.htm>. Published December 10, 2015.
6. McCormick Science Institute website. <http://www.mccormickscienceinstitute.com/>
7. Sercarz LL. The Spice Companion: A Guide to the World of Spices. New York, NY: Clarkson Potter; 2016.
8. Slide show: guide to herbs and spices. Mayo Clinic website. <http://www.mayoclinic.com/health/spices/MY01566>
9. Spices by cuisine. Cook Smarts website. <http://www.cooksmarts.com/resources/infographics/spices-by-cuisine/>